ACUMEN PORTFOLIO 4 Factsheet

MARKET COMMENTARY

Technology stocks continued to shine as the S&P 500 Technology Index surged 9.46% this month, primarily due to media attention on artificial intelligence and semiconductors. One of the key players in this sector was Nvidia, which recently hit a $1 trillion market cap following a 36.34% increase in share price in May, taking year-to-date gains towards 160%. The S&P 500 rose marginally, rising 0.43% over the month whilst the MSCI World fell -0.93%, driven lower by the UK and Europe, down -5.04% and -2.36%, respectively. The MSCI emerging market equity index fell -1.66%. The United States debt-ceiling negotiations added volatility to the front end of the US treasury curve. This was reflected in interest rate futures, which fluctuated significantly throughout the month, at one stage pricing in a 70% probability of a June quarter-point rate hike, before falling back to end the month at 36%, reflecting House, and ultimately Congressional approval, averting a US default. Meanwhile, the UK 10-year yield continued its charge, rising by 47bps to 4.18% (yields move inversely to prices). Developed market government bonds ended the month down -2.19%, underperforming global investment grade and high-yield corporate debt, which declined -1.86% and -1.15%, respectively. The Bloomberg Commodity Index fell -6.08%, driven lower by the energy and industrial metals subsectors. After surpassing a key resistance level of $2,000 in April, Gold declined -4.27%, settling at $1,962 an ounce whilst Silver fell -9.85% from its intra-month high. In currency markets, the UK pound fell slightly versus the US dollar to 1.24, tempering a strong performance so far this year that saw the currency pair peak just above 1.26 earlier in the month.
